

• POCKET BOOK

Blue silk pockets and pouches line the inside of this unique clutch from Mary Lydia Ryan. Ryan, a local musician, designed a collection of handmade cocktail purses, clutches and billfolds with Northwest artist Gary Parker and unveiled it last July. We love how the playful collection blends recycled book covers and fine silk. $200-$300; visit Ryan's online store at mlrstore.com to find retail locations.

• SEE AND BE SEEN

Who says safety and style can't coexist? Thanks to Robin Freedman, local mom-on-the-move and designer/owner of Crashwear, you can have both. In a wide array of colors, this vest—perfect for scooter and motorcycle riders, runners and dog walkers—has Velcro pockets for keys and cell phone and reflective patches for visibility after dark. $29.99 at various scooter retailers, including Scooter Gallery Seattle (University District, 1001 NE Boat St.; 206.547.7400), or at crashwear.net.

• HIGH-TECH HEELS

Like something out of Jane Jetson's closet, these convertible heels might be the next step in futuristic fashion. Adjusting from a height of 3-1/4 inches down to 1-1/2 inches, Camileon Heels come in several simple yet elegant designs, including the Valeria (see below), which is capped in white and made from Italian Napa leather. Designed by brother-and-sister team David and Donna Handel (David is a New Jersey-based radiologist with a specific interest in musculoskeletal problems), these shoes won't force you to choose between style and comfort. $225-$325 exclusively at The Finerie (Downtown, 1215 First Ave.; 206.652.4664; thefinerie.com).
